RESEARCH INTERESTS

I am a human-environment interactions geographer/land systems scientist who uses geospatial modeling, remote sensing and uncrewed aerial systems to work at the food-water-energy nexus at multiple spatio-temporal scales. I focus on complex socio-ecological systems dynamics, especially centered on understanding and quantifying environmental variability and the vulnerability of populations to environmental changes and extremes. Much of my work is concentrated in the drylands of eastern and southern Africa, and Peru, as well as coastal North America and Nepal, where I collaborate with diverse stakeholders and community partners to integrate geospatial technologies with socio-economic indicators to study coupled human-natural systems.
